

McCombe House - Riverhead, New York

Sited at the top of a hill overlooking Long Island Sound, the building serves as a farmhouse for a 100-acre orchard. A greenhouse is the focus of the entrance facade and is seen against a background of stone walls that form the front of the house. The main entry opens to a large hall which is the unifying vertical space that ties together the entire structure. From this space radiate the kitchen, living room, and guest room, and the four bedrooms on the second floor, each with a handsome view.
